Program - Fabrication Specialty - Orbital Tube Welding

I grew up in Glendora and La Puente, California, and I've been welding and fabricating for seven years in the off-road industry, as well as in food processing and pharmaceutical plants. I always wanted to be a fabricator because I love how you can take a piece of metal and create something new from it.

I first heard about Tri-Community from my bosses at Solo Motorsports. They knew Aaron Iha and told me about his fabrication class. I had the basic fundamentals of welding, but I wanted to pursue a career as a fabricator, not just be a welder.

A majority of my time over the last four years at Tri-Community has been in the fabrication class. I also took the welding class with Joe and Danny to get certified for structural steel. The fabrication class gave me the confidence and skills to not only build just about anything but also to independently operate the machines involved in creating a product. Everything Aaron has taught me—from bending, machining, and 3D modeling to chassis work—has helped me take my career to so many different levels over the years.

I first connected with SpaceX when I applied for a position through the job board on the Tri-Community website. Now, I'm working in the aerospace industry at SpaceX as a Level 3 Orbital Tube Welder, building parts for rocket engines. No matter your goals, the Fabrication program at Tri-Community is the perfect way to start working toward them. The opportunities are endless!
